ACT is a multifaceted Regulatory Compliance Service provider assisting companies with local, state, and federal regulatory compliance. ACT provides environmental planning, permitting, restoration, monitoring, and compliance services to a wide range of stakeholders including private corporations, regulators, and conservation groups. ACT will act as an extension of your current staff, with a role range from permit applications to fully integrated and comprehensive services handling all aspects of your regulatory compliance needs.

Keeping track of the regulatory compliance requirements is both daunting and cumbersome due to state and federal agencies having specific reporting requirements with regard to hazardous materials. ACT has the expertise and experience to assist with a variety of compliance and permitting activities required by regulatory agencies for industrial and commercial facilities. Our services are designed to help our clients evaluate and implement regulatory compliance requirements at the local, state, and federal levels.

Core services include project management, physical and biological resource inventory and analysis, environmental compliance, ecological restoration, cultural and archaeological resource management, data management, and Geographic Information Systems (GIS). We also provide professional and technical support for human health services. In addition, we have teaming agreements in place to provide landscape architecture, engineering, remediation, surveying, and construction services.
